The HACCP Roundtable is a continuation of the Indiana State Poultry Association’s Food Safety Roundtable series. This one day program provides a morning forum for processors to discuss food safety and current daily challenges in meeting federal and state food processing regulations. After lunch, representatives from the federal (USDA-FSIS) and state (Indiana Board of Animal Health) inspection programs will be available to answer questions and provide explanation on current inspection policy. The benefit of this first hand knowledge is that it allows one to improve compliance with the processing regulations for meat, poultry, and egg products.

An invitation has been extended to USDA-FSIS and the Indiana State Board of Animal Health for this October 7, 2008 Roundtable.

Questions may be submitted in advance and anonymously to Angie Honeywell at the email or fax number provided. Questions will also be anonymously compiled from the industry discussion as requested. As a courtesy to our regulatory personnel, please try and send questions in advance.

Also, advance registration is requested for planning purposes. There is no charge for attending this program. Current sponsors of the program include the Indiana State Poultry Association; and Purdue University, Department of Food Science. Additional sponsors are welcome. Please contact Angie Honeywell for further details.

Guest Speaker – Dr. Patricia Curtis, Auburn University

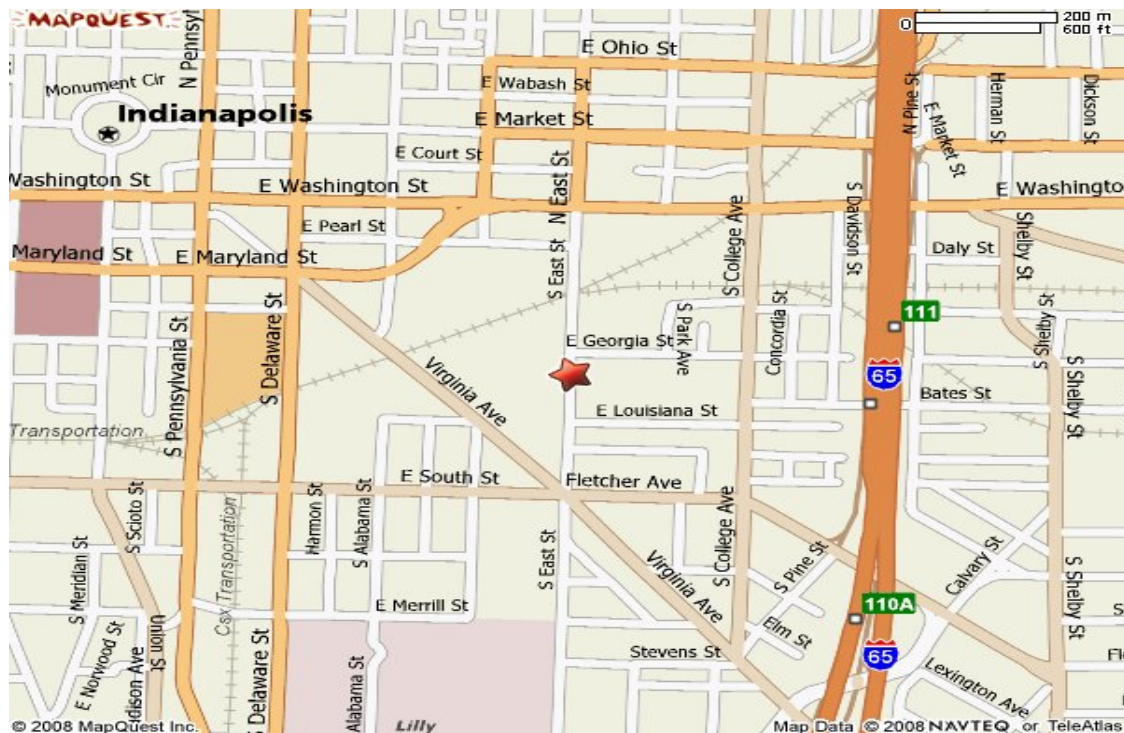

Dr. Curtis is going to present information on the new “Performance Based Sanitation” that southern states are beginning to implement in order to conserve water. She is going to discuss what Performance Based Sanitation is, and the pros and cons of this new system. This approach has been accepted by the USDA-FSIS and allows processors to significantly reduce their sanitation time and water use therefore saving the plant money.

Patricia A. (Pat) Curtis is a native Texan and received her Ph.D. at Texas A&M. She comes to Auburn from North Carolina State University (NCSU). Since coming to Auburn, Pat has received the Poultry Science Association's Poultry Products Research Award and the Helene Cecil Leadership award for her scientific contributions in the field of poultry science and for her leadership role in the promotional and developmental opportunities for women in the area of poultry science. Her primary responsibilities while at NCSU were to work with the poultry and egg industries. While at NCSU, Pat received the North Carolina Cooperative Extension Service Leadership Award. Prior to coming to NCSU she taught at the University of Wisconsin--River Falls. She is a Professor and the Director of the Poultry Products Safety & Quality Peak of Excellence Program. Pat has focused her research on quality and safety attributes of poultry and egg products.
